

Sinclair Broadcast Group's recent actions seem courageous to me. If Michael Moore can make a movie so one-sided and call it a documentary, then this must be okay too, even though the liberal media is furious about it.

Although some say that Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, I believe that they have to pay license fees. They are obligated to serve the public interest just as a newspaper is, and that's what they're doing in covering a point of view that has not really been heard. Many people agree with the tenor of the views they are putting forth, so let's hear what they have to say. I'd like to hear the view-points of both sides, but the views of the "Swifties" have been successfully blocked by the liberal media.

Sinclair's actions show that not everyone can be bought. Hooray for Sinclair! Again I say, "Hip-Hip-Hooray!"
